PS No.	I am (User)	I'm trying to	But	Because	Which makes me feel
PS-1 (Customer)	a busy professional / student who wants to buy books regularly	find and buy specific books at a fair price	I don't have time to visit multiple physical stores to compare price and availability	there's no single reliable online platform with a wide, trustworthy book catalog	frustrated — like I am wasting both time and money
PS-2 (Seller)	an independent bookseller / small publisher	reach more readers online and grow my sales	I lack a simple, affordable platform to list and manage my inventory	building and maintaining my own e-commerce website is expensive and technical	restricted to my local market and unable to compete with larger stores
PS-3 (Admin)	the operator of a multi-seller bookstore platform	run a trustworthy and well-organized marketplace	I have no centralized way to vet sellers, manage catalog quality, or monitor orders and users	there's no admin control layer across sellers, books, users and orders	concerned that the platform's quality and trust could easily slip
